An Observational study to ascertain the action of Pulsatilla in management of Spasmodic Dysmenorrhoea

Dr Manisha D. Kale

Abstract: An observational study was done to ascertain the action of Pulsatilla in management of spasmodic Dysmenorrhoea from 3 different locations (sites). 150 cases were documented for at least three to four consecutive menstrual cycles. The intensity and duration of pain was recorded. The final result of the study was recorded after 90-120 days of observations.

Keywords: Spasmodic dysmenorrhoea, Adolescent, Prostaglandin, Homoeopathy, Pulsatilla

(Contd. from November Issue)

Negative	87	0.58
Total	150	1		(NS)

a. Based on Z Approximation. NS- Not Significant

Interpretation: In this data, just about half of those who were having positive history of Dysmenorrhoea or just below the test proportion was 0.5. As hypothesis states here, the difference in proportions is not significant. It was not rejected at $p = 0.06$. i.e. Family history of dysmenorrhoea did not make any difference in this study.

Improved	28	50	-22
Dropped	10	50	-40

 Highly significant

Interpretation: In the study of 150 patients, the effect of the treatment observed: recovery in 112, improvement in 28 and dropped cases 10, resulting in, 50 expected patients per effect. The residual is equal to the observed frequency minus the expected value. The table shows that, the number of patients' recovered was more than improved and dropped out. An assumption "effect of the treatments equal in all patients" was expected.

The low significance value ($p=0.0001$) suggests that the patients' recovery was highly significant in the study.

Total	45 (100%)	41 (100%)	64 (100%)	150 (100%)

 Highly significant

Interpretation: It was observed in the study, the high number of patients were having scanty nature of menstrual flow 64 (43%) and duration of pain for two days 74 (49%). A hypothesis stated here that, "duration of pain is not associated with nature of menstrual flow". It was rejected at the level of significance ($p=0.0001$). It was concluded that, duration of pain was strongly associated with nature of menstrual flow in the study.

 Highly significant

Interpretation: It was observed in the study, the high number of patients were having psora miasm 90(60%) and dominance age group was <=20 years, 101(67%). A hypothesis stated here that, "age group is not associated with Miasm." It was rejected at the level of significance ($p=0.0001$). So it was concluded that, age group was strongly associated with Miasm.

Interpretation: In the study of 150 patients, duration for pain to subside was observed as: 61 patients in 30 minutes followed by in 40, 20 and 50 minutes, with 37 expected patients per group(min). The residual is equal to the observed frequency minus the expected value.

The table shows that, the duration of pain subsided in 61(41%) in 30 minutes followed by 39(26%) in 40 minutes and so on. An assumption "the duration (minutes) to subside pain is equal in all patients" was expected.

The low significance value ($p=0.0001$) suggests that the duration for pain to subside in 61 (41%) patients was 30 minutes, was highly significant and differed by other duration 20, 40 and 50 minutes in the study.

Discussion

In my study, it was observed that primary dysmenorrhoea was more common to women of sedentary occupation, especially students. In the study, it was found that 110 cases out of 150 were students. According to the study, the incidence was more common among the women in their later tweens and twenties. Frequency of cases increased up to age of 20 and then decreased with advancing age. Through the present study, the incidence of Primary Dysmenorrhoea were analyzed and it was found that age group between 15 to 20 years have high incidence, out of 150 cases 98 cases (65%) belonged to the group. The next high incidence in descending order 20-25, 25-30 and 30-35. This was 17%, 11% and 7% in group respectively.

So out of 150 cases, 98 cases were found below the age of 20 years and other cases above the age of 20 years.

Discussion from My Observational Study

During and just before menstruation most women are less efficient physically and more unstable emotionally. These factors alone will lower the pain threshold and lead to exaggeration of minor discomfort. Perception of the same degree of peripheral stimulus will be interpreted differently; a phlegmatic woman may describe moderate discomfort, while a high-strong, supersensitive woman might describe severe and perhaps incapacitating pain.

Psychologic factors may alter the perception of pain. Anxious, apprehensive, nervous, tense women are prone to suffer. Few psychological circumstances like unhappiness at home or at work, fear of losing employment, and anxiety over examinations or any such causes can cause dysmenorrhoea. The allopathic physician sees only the physical factors and prescribe for it. But in homoeopathy, which gives prime importance to the psychological outlay, treatment is better. All these factors clearly define the psychological impact in the perception of pain.

Dysmenorrhoea which used to be one of the ethological puzzles of gynaecology, has responded to intensive investigations, and significant advances have been made. The causation of dysmenorrhoea has been now understood extensively as the "Prostaglandin (PG) theory." At menstruation, PGs are released and produce the contractility of the uterine muscle and vasculature, causing contractions, ischemia and associated pain. High concentration of endometrial prostaglandin production requires the sequential stimulation by oestrogen followed by progesterone. So, dysmenorrhoea will be present only in the ovulatory cycle. The pain of dysmenorrhoea will start only after some period of menarche, because the menstruation of first few periods are only due to oestrogen withdrawal and are anovulatory.

The pain of primary dysmenorrhoea usually begins a few hours before or just after the onset of a menstrual period and may last up to 48-72 hours, although in some cases it may continue throughout several days. In the given study 74 cases gave the history of duration of pain lasting for 2 days, 35 cases for 3 days and 41 cases for 1 day.

The differentiation between primary and secondary dysmenorrhoea may be difficult, so the history is of obvious importance. The history should include the age of onset and its temporal relationship to menarche. The symptoms experienced, their association with the onset of menstruation, and their duration are of differentiating importance. Ultrasound scanning can be useful if pelvic examination has been difficult or inconclusive. So in my study I used Ultrasonography to diagnose a case, which excludes the organic causes of secondary dysmenorrhoea.

Because of the many symptoms and the millions of sufferers, menstrual cramps have been traditionally considered by the medical community as a "mirror" of female ailment. But the problem is either ignored or else treated with powerful painkilling drugs and tranquilizers. Often these drugs has significant side effects and does nothing to alleviate or help prevent the problem on a long-term basis.

According to Jeffocate, 'A dysmenorrhoeic mother has a dysmenorrhoeic daughter.' Some girls experience dysmenorrhoea mainly because their education and outlook on sex is faulty. In few cases the girls may be influenced by their mothers and sisters by seeing or hearing their sufferings.

According to Novak, 30% of the patients of dysmenorrhoeic mothers had painful periods. In my study, it was found that in 150 cases, 63 patient had positive family history of dysmenorrhoea that is 42% and 87 patient had negative family history that is 58%. So, family history of dysmenorrhoea did not make any difference in this study.

In the study of 150 cases, the effect of treatment observed recovery in 112 cases, improvement in 28 cases and dropped cases 10. The low significance value ($P = 0.0001$) suggest that the patient recovery was highly significant in the study. All NSAIDs are thought to be effective in relieving pain. But, up to 70% gastrointestinal toxicity is a particular concern with NSAIDs and NSAIDs may worsen asthma, hypertension, renal impairment, or cardiac failure. Also, the PG inhibitors have various side effects, which range from minor ailments to major life-threatening ailments. They include ailments like nausea, vomiting, dyspepsia, diarrhea, rash, G.I ulcers, bronchospasm, nephritic syndrome, acute interstitial nephritis, acute papillary and tubular necrosis etc. Sometimes these may even include neurological symptoms like disorientation, dizziness, blurred vision, nervousness etc.

Now a day, the use of contraceptive pills for primary dysmenorrhoea has been a custom in allopathy by the idea that an an-ovulatory cycle will not produce pain. The relief of dysmenorrhoea is generally limited to the cycle treated and the patient may have breakthrough bleeding, weight gain, breast tenderness, acne and mood changes as the effects of treatment.

Dilatation of cervix is still practiced even though the idea was depreciated. The women may develop chronic cervicitis, ectropion, and incompetent cervix, which will lead to premature labor or habitual abortions in the subsequent pregnancies. Few studies have been shown the efficaciousness of vitamins and mineral supplementations in the treatment of primary dysmenorrhoea.

Above all the psychological overlay should be given much importance in treating a patient with dysmenorrhoea. The best hope of limiting the intensity of spasmodic dysmenorrhoea, or the incapacitation it causes, lies in teaching young girls a proper outlook on menstruation, a simple explanation of its physiology and health in general. Women suffering from severe dysmenorrhoea need sympathy and support. According to allopathic line of management with symptomatology of dysmenorrhoea in all the cases and prescriptions were made only on a trial basis. And if one mode fails they will go to next step of management. Thus they begin their treatment with simple analgesics, goes to oral pills and PG inhibitors and in few cases may end in surgery. They are giving much importance to the common symptoms of the disease only.

For the treatment of a case of primary dysmenorrhoea, peculiar symptoms during the episode and symptoms during the intermenstrual period are considered in homoeopathy. As far as miasm is concerned most of the authors say dysmenorrhoea showing itself very early, at puberty are psoric in nature. All functional menstrual disorders come under psoric miasm. In my study of 150 patients, miasm observed 'Psora patients were more (90) than psoro-sycotic (55) and Psoro-sphilitic.'

Summary and Conclusion

After understanding the clinical presentation of primary dysmenorrhoea, I studied 150 confirmed cases of Primary dysmenorrhoea for the present study.

All 150 cases were studied in detail to draw the following conclusion:

1. The highest incidence falls in the age group of 15-20 years (65%)
2. The nature of menstrual flow was observed scanty in maximum number of cases (43%)
3. During primary dysmenorrhoea, the duration of pain lasted for 2 days in maximum number of cases (49%)
4. After detail study of 'Miasmatic dominance,' it was found that 60% cases belonged to Psora.
5. The family history of dysmenorrhoea did not make any difference in my study, and found 42% cases with positive family history and 58% cases with negative family history.
6. In the study 75% of 150 cases, 112 cases recovered completely.
7. For rapidity of action of 'Pulsatilla,' the duration for pain to subside was observed to be 30 minutes in maximum cases (41%)

From all above observations, I conclude this research work definite role in treating Primary dysmenorrhoea and the action of Pulsatilla nigricans in treating spasmodic dysmenorrhoea have been proved.

Limitations

1. The study was limited for primary dysmenorrhoea only.
2. Secondary dysmenorrhoea is always with some pathological change or any over growth like ovarian cyst uterine fibroid, polyp etc. So, the pain of secondary dysmenorrhoea cannot be cured by a single homeopathic remedy.

- In emergency cases, like fainting condition or shock due to severe agonizing where the patient needs hospitalization, homeopathy has limitations.
- The study was just a verbal method i.e. history taking where subjective bias related, the study had not included any objective assessment for analysis the cases.

Result

The psycho-social factors like ignorance, irritability, anxious, apprehensive, nervous, tense women are prone to suffer from spasmodic dysmenorrhoea. In this study, 472 patients were screened from 3 sites and 150 were enrolled. The homeopathic medicine Pulsatilla n. was administered during the attack of Primary dysmenorrhoea for 3-4 cycles consecutively and records were maintained during each follow-up of patient.

The result was categorized:

- Recovered: The patients who fulfilled the above criteria for 3 months or more were considered to be completely recovered if there was overall relief of the symptoms.
- Improved: The patient was considered to be improved when the intensity of pain lessened, duration become short with less associated symptoms improving with the treatment but not completely cured.
- Dropped: The patient whose symptoms were not improving were considered to be dropped and those patient was unable to continue also.

The data was analyzed by Chi-square test and statistical significance of the differences between phases was tested and p-value 0.001 was taken as statistically significant and this p-value is highly significant. The low significance value ($p = 0.0001$) suggests that the patient's recovery was highly significant in the study.

For rapidity of action of 'Pulsatilla,' the duration for pain to subside was 30 minutes in maximum cases (41%). From all above observations, I conclude this research work definite action of Pulsatilla nigricans in treating spasmodic dysmenorrhoea have been proved.

Abstract

Gastritis is acute or chronic inflammation of the stomach and is most often diffuse, mostly caused by Helicobacter pylori and bile reflux. It is the commonest disorder encountered in the clinical practice. Change in dietary habits – like having irregular meals, fast foods, addictions like smoking and alcohol also play major role. Although not life threatening as other major illness, the symptoms can be distressing and can cause discomfort to enjoy normal life and drain the mental and physical energy. If gastritis is not treated earlier the complications are grave like peptic ulcer, pyloric stenosis and subsequent perforation. Homoeopathy plays a major role in treating gastritis. Homeopathy is very effective in managing all the acute as well as chronic expressions of gastritis; it also plays an important role in prevention of relapse of the condition.

Keywords: Gastritis, Homoeopathy

Introduction: Gastritis is an inflammation, irritation, or erosion of the lining of the stomach. It can occur suddenly (acute) or gradually (chronic).¹ Gastritis can be caused by irritation due to excessive alcohol use, chronic vomiting, stress, or the use of certain medications such as aspirin or other anti-inflammatory drugs. It may also be caused by any of the following:

- Helicobacter pylori (H. pylori): A bacteria that lives in the mucous lining of the stomach.
- Pernicious anemia.
- Bile reflux.
- Infections caused by bacteria.²
- Pathology: The mucosal injury and subsequent acute inflammation occurs by reduced blood flow, resulting in mucosal hypo-perfusion due to ischemia. Increased acid secretion and its accumulation due to H. pylori infection resulting in damage to epithelial barrier. Decreased production of bicarbonate buffer. Reflux of duodenal contents into the stomach.³

Clinical classification of gastritis:

- A. Acute gastritis: It refers to short term inflammation and to neutrophilic infiltrate. It is mainly due to stress.
- B. Chronic gastritis: It refers to longstanding forms and to mononuclear cell infiltrates especially lymphocytes and macrophages.

Common gastritis: It is mainly due to Helicobacter pylori and bile reflux.⁴

Some of the Non Gastro Intestinal associated disorders which induce gastritis or inflammation of gastric mucosa are coronary heart disease, Rosacea, iron deficiency and anorexia in aging.⁵

Clinical features: The most common symptoms include : nausea or recurrent upset stomach, anorexia, abdominal bloating, abdominal discomfort, pain, vomiting, indigestion, burning or gnawing feeling in the stomach between meals or at night, hiccupping, loss of appetite, vomiting blood or coffee ground-like material and black tarry stools.⁶

Complications: They are infrequent but may include ulcer, polyps, benign and malignant tumors and cancer.⁷

Diagnosis: To diagnose gastritis, we have to review the personal and family medical history of the patient and after performing a thorough physical evaluation, any of the following tests may be recommended

- Upper gastrointestinal endoscopy.
- CBC.
- Tissue Biopsy.
- Fecal occult blood test.⁸

Homoeopathic approach:

Nux vomica: Heart burn with flatulence, nausea and vomiting in the morning, he feels if 'I could only vomit, I would be so much better.' alternating constipation and diarrhoea. Nux vomica is indicated in cases of chronic gastritis which is caused by tobacco, alcoholic stimulants, aromatic or patent medicines, sedentary habits, highly spiced food. Contractive, squeezing and stomach ache.

Lycopodium: It has pain in the pit of the stomach when the hypochondria are pressed and pain in hypochondria when stomach is pressed. There is fullness even after light meal with no intestinal irritation. Offensive discharges. Characteristic of Lycopodium is the patient goes to meal with a vigorous appetite, but after eating a small quantity of food he feels so full and bloated that he has to force himself to swallow another mouthful and leaves the table with his hunger, only momentarily satisfied.

Phosphorous: Gastritis with chronic erosion. Burning, gnawing circumscribed pain. The all gone feeling at 11 a.m. starting from stomach to bowel.

Arsenicum album: Burning pain in stomach like FIRE, as if hot coals were applied to part, better by hot application, hot drinks, nausea, retching, and vomiting of slimy mucous tingled with blood.

Veratrum album: Hiccoughs after hot drinks. Forceful eructation mostly of air. After frequent eructation copious ejection of mucous. Colicky pain with salivation, profuse cold perspiration.

Conclusion:

Homoeopathy has a holistic approach, Gastritis is related to stress where Homoeopathy plays a very good role in managing it, it will also help to reduce the nausea, burning, belching and symptoms associated with the illness.
